Input from UX professionals @ UX camp 2018

• Learning by doing

The setup of our UXD course

1,2,4

- 1 week to learn a set of design methods
 - 1 (or two) simple/clearly scoped assignment (often with Inholland as client)
 - Duo's
 - 1 or 2 instruction sessions a day
- 2 weeks to apply these design methods with some coaching
 - Each group (3-5 students) their own project
 - Bit more complex challenge/context
 - Limited instruction on methods, guest lectures
- 4 weeks to apply the design methods to a complex challenge
 - Each group (3-5 students) their own project
 - More complex challenge/context
 - Guest lectures and Instruction on demand

Experience

Students & clients

- Many clients miss a good understanding of UX design
 - Heard about usability and visual designs
 - Less aware of how we come to a suitable solution
 - UX research (understanding the end user and context)
 - design thinking (prototyping and testing)
- The UXD minor is teaching both clients and students
 - helps them see the added value of UX research and design thinking
 - Demonstrates how quickly you can design tangible and tested improvements

Preconditions for success in a pressure cooker project

- Commitment of client
 - Kick-off, Intermediate and final presentation
 - Available for feedback, questions
 - One contact person with decision power
- Clear UX challenges
 - SMART goals (instead of improve the UX)
 - Clear business model and objectives
- Contact with end users
 - Prearranged meetings in the right day and week.
 - Representative users

Students

+ positive

- Real clients, with real challenges
- Feedback from teachers
- Having a dedicated workspace
- Relevant skills

- Struggle with

- 9-5 schedule, mandatory attendance
- Detailed self assessment
